

Maybe you would like to get some support for yourself?

Or maybe you're not totally sure and would like to talk to someone more about it?

If so - speak with your mum, dad or the grown-up who cares for you most. You can also speak to your teacher. Once you've told a grown-up about wanting support they will arrange for you to see the counsellor to try out if Time 4 Me is the right sort of support for you or not.

Life feels good when things are going OK. You can play, have fun, and enjoy learning new things. It feels good when you are with your family and friends.

Sometimes stuff happens that means life doesn't feel OK.

Tough things can make you feel

SAD CROSS WORRIED CONFUSED

Sometimes you don't sleep well, or maybe you eat less or more than usual. Some kids find it harder to get on at school and they can get into more trouble at home too.

When hard things happen it can affect how you get on with your friends, sisters, brothers, mum or dad.

For a while it can feel like there is not much room for fun in your life.

All these things are normal when tough stuff happens.

If life isn't going so well it's important to find someone safe to talk to. Some kids talk to their mum or dad, grandma, granddad, teacher or other grown-up.

Sometimes it's also good for kids to talk to a grown-up called a counsellor. Counsellors listen to kids. They help them figure out their feelings.

You can tell a counsellor just how you feel. You don't have to hide or put on a mask.

When you go to see a counsellor you might play or draw about how you feel. That is often easier than just talking. It helps make feelings less scary. It stops you feeling so mixed-up about what is happening in your life.

Talking with a counsellor is about finding ways to feel better.

It's about learning to cope with hard stuff that happens. You will find out about what and who makes you feel strong, and how you can get more fun back in your life.

A Time 4 Me counsellor comes to your school each week. Hopefully you already know their name and what they look like!
